Waiting for a certain sum before opening a savings account often means indefinite postponement. Start with what you have now and add to it as you can. Most savings accounts have been built that way. Facts About Hawks.

(By Alvin M. Peterson in Dumb Animals.)

Investigations made by the United State Department of Agriculture show that many of our hawks are among our most useful birds. In spite of this fact, many people seem to be possessed with a mania for shooting them. Let a hawk appear in sight and they run for their guns as though their lives were in danger. I frequently see men sneaking through the woods and pastures trying to get near hawks for a shot. Others I see sallying forth gun in hand because a hawk has been discovered perched in a distant tree. There is no effort made by these gunners to determine the kind of hawk the bird may be or what it is doing. Large numbers of hawks are thus shot each year far from poultry yards. These hawks are in fact most of them actually doing good work when discovered and killed. Luckily hawks are very sharp-eyed and large numbers of them manage to keep far from man and his firearms.

But a short time ago I stood for some time watching a pair of large hawks that were sailing low over an oak forest. They sailed slowly just above the tops of the trees, looking this way and that as they carefully examined the forest floor for prey. Of one thing I was certain, these majestic birds were not hunting for poultry. They were in the wrong place for that. I frequently surprise hawks perched in trees far from farmhouses, where they have unobstructed views of near-by fields, meadows and open pastures. What are these birds looking for? Surely not for poultry, because there are no chickens there. They are there for other purposes. They are in fact on the lookout for mice and other small mammals, which they destroy in large numbers, thus doing some valuable work for the farmer.

Investigations have proved that we have but three destructive hawks, the Cooper, sharp-shinned, and goshawk. These hawks are often called blue darters because of their color and their rapid darting flight. They are able to catch birds on the wing and destroy game, song birds, and poultry. The goshawk is the largest of these and the most destructive, but it is rare, visiting us only occasionally in winter. The Cooper, on the other hand, is not only very destructive, but is also quite common and does the most damage. It is about sixteen inches long and may be known by its long, rounded tail. The sharp-shinned is also destructive, but is handicapped by its size, for it is but a foot long. It may be identified by its long, square tail.

The red-shouldered, red-tailed, marsh and sparrow-hawks are the most common of our useful hawks. The rough-legged and broad-winged are also useful, but are rarer than the preceding species. The red-shouldered hawk is nearly twenty inches long and is named from its chestnut shoulders. The red-tailed is two or three inches longer than the red-shouldered and may be identified by its reddish-brown tail. These hawks fly slowly, often soaring and sailing around while looking about for mammals, grasshoppers, toads, snakes, and other things to eat. The marsh hawk is about as large as the red-shouldered hawk and may be identified by the large patch of white on the rump. Unlike the red-shouldered and red-tailed hawks, which have short tails, it has a long tail and in this respect resembles the blue darters. It differs from the other hawks mentioned in that it nests on the ground, the others all nesting in trees. Its manner of flight is also different from that of the others. It soars or sails but little, but twists and turns as it flies slowly very near the ground looking for its prey. The sparrow-hawk is but ten inches long and nests in holes in trees, often finding and making use of a flicker's hole which is about the right size.

The stomachs of two hundred and twenty red-shouldered hawks were examined by Dr. Fisher for the United States Department of Agriculture, and of these one hundred and two were found to have eaten mice, forty of them had feasted on other mammals, and ninety-two of them had eaten insects, whereas but three of these so-called hen-hawks had eaten poultry. The feeding habits of the red-tailed hawk are much the same as those of the red-shouldered, making it practically as useful a bird. The rough-legged hawk lives to a great extent on meadow mice and lemmings, while the marsh-hawk lives mainly on mice and other small mammals, frogs, and grasshoppers, but seven out of one hundred and twenty-four stomachs examined containing poultry. Three hundred and twenty stomachs of the sparrow-hawk were examined by Dr. Fisher, two hundred and fifteen of them containing insects and eighty-nine the remains of mice.

It cannot be emphasized too strongly that we have a number of different species of hawk, many of which are very useful birds; that we have but two common destructive hawks, the Cooper and sharp-shinned, which are our true hen-hawks; and that the red shouldered and red-tailed hawks, which are generally known as hen-hawks, are very useful birds as also are the marsh, rough-legged, broad-winged, and sparrow-hawks. Mr. Frank M. Chapman sums up the situation as regards hawks as follows: "It is difficult to explain the difference between these hawks with sufficient clearness to prevent one's killing the wrong kind, but if the farmer will withhold his judgment against hawks in general, and shoot only those that visit his poultry yard, he will not go far astray."

Egg Parasites.

Two hundred colonies of anastatus bifasciatus, an egg parasite of the gypsy moth, have been reserved for colonization in Maine in the campaign to control the gypsy moth situation, according to a message just received by E. L. Newdick, chief of the bureau of plant industry, Maine Department of Agriculture, from C. W. Collins, entomologist at the bureau of entomology, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Dr. Collins in his letter states that blue prints have been selected of the following towns in Maine in which colonies could be distributed: Bath, Bristol, Whitefield, Westport, Damariscotta, Washington, Southport, Bremen, Somerville, Boothbay, Nobleboro, Chins, Edgecomb, Waldoboro, and Vassalboro. In Bath some colonies have been liberated but colonization is not complete. The colonies are ready to be taken into the field as soon as the roads are passable.

The actual planting of the colonies will be done by Nelson Trafton, expert for the Maine Department of Agriculture, this being a cooperative project of the Federal and State Departments of Agriculture. This particular planting of 200 colonies is part of a plan extending over a period of years to establish colonies of the parasite in a group of towns running from the New Hampshire line to the coast of Maine across a tier of towns bordering on the heavy gypsy moth infestation.

May the mighty and great roll in splendor and state. I envy them not, I declare it; I eat my own lamb, my own chicken and ham, I shear my own sheep and I wear it. I have lawns, I have bowers, I have fruits, I have flowers, the lark is my morning alarmer; so you jolly dogs now, here's God bless the plow—long life and content to the farmer.—From an old almanack.

The Eighteenth Annual.

A. W. Walker & Son celebrated their thirty-first year in the agricultural business by giving their eighteenth annual field day on Wednesday.

The rain of Tuesday made roads, which had been none too good before that date, worse; yet there was a large assemblage just the same. All the available parking room about the Walker factories and storehouses was filled with autos, and about four hundred persons sat down to the ample dinner of baked beans and brown bread.

Mr. Walker, senior, presided over the post-prandial exercises, which consisted of a series of talks on orcharding and farming. The speakers were:

Alton C. Wheeler, South Paris.
H. W. Barnard, Jr., Portland.
L. E. McIntire, Waterford.
Edward Swift, Newton Highlands, Mass.
R. F. Thomas, South Paris.
Prof. George Yeaton, Augusta.

When Mr. Walker arrived at the end of the list, he said he was going to announce the last speaker—"Uncle George, somebody that everybody knew."

"Uncle George" was not to be taken aback by any such introduction. He said he was glad to be at this feast and to see so many other people here to see Percy and his father.

Mr. Thomas' address was largely given over to the chemical composition of soils and fertilizers with especial reference to orchards, and Prof. Yeaton paid special attention to planting and pruning. After using up a little time in his talk, he announced he was going to stop for he didn't want people to confound him with another orator who in praise of his long periods said as he looked over the ocean, which apparently was near at hand, "Here is the ocean, which in time will dry up; but therein lies the difference between it and me. I can't."

The Walkers had their usual display of farm machinery in the field in the rear of their storehouses, while within were to be seen gas engines, electric lighting plants, milking machines, and other things necessary to farm work.

In Grateful Remembrance

of My Mother, Mrs. Matilda A. Field,

I love her, still—
Whose thoughts were always gentle,
Whose quiet presence was a fragrance sweet,
Whose dear hands smoothed away our troubles,
And guided patiently our stumbling feet.

Every motion of her slender body,
Spoke silently of Love's own tender grace;
Eternal things—refined and pure and holy—
Were written plainly in her calm, sweet face.

Wellsprings of love were her soft, brown eyes,
And what can I say of her smile?
'Twas the smile of an angel, I am sure,
In whose heart could be found no guile.

I love her, still—
In whose life there grew and blossomed
The flowers rare, which came from Love's pure seeds;
Grew quietly in sunshine, storm and tempest,
And blossomed forth in kindly, loving deeds.

LENA H. FARRAR.

NORWAY.

The public camping ground below the Falls is being put in readiness for summer use. It was well patronized last year and quite likely will be this year. It is a sightly place as well as all the road on the plain above the covered bridge, having an extended and fine view of the White Mountains up through the Pennesseewassee valley and the foot hills surrounding it north and east.

Rev. and Mrs. Charles A. Tenney of Southbridge, Mass., have been visiting his sisters, Mrs. F. A. Danforth and Mrs. Izah Allen.

Mrs. Wesley C. Day has been a guest of Mrs. Earl Rines at Wiscasset during the past week.

J. Freeland Bolster has returned from the Central Maine General Hospital in Lewiston.

Harry Rust Woman's Relief Corps will serve a public dinner on Thursday, the proceeds to be used for Memorial Day expenses. The committee in charge will be Mrs. Edith Edwards, Mrs. Sadie Lapham, Mrs. Miranda Emerson and Mrs. Esther Rich.

Oliver Merrill has sold his farm at Noble's Corner to Leslie Curtis. Mr. Merrill and family have been living in the village for some little time.

Mrs. Faye Blake has been visiting in Stark and Groveton, N. H.

Mrs. Elizabeth Holman Tidd has bought the Eugene F. Smith house on Deering Street for a summer residence.

The Neighborly Club was pleasantly entertained on Monday of last week at the home of Mrs. Charles Herrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Pliny Allen have received word of the narrow escape of their daughter, Mrs. James Swett, from death at Southern Pines, N. C., from the bite of a rattlesnake. Mrs. Swett had accompanied Mr. Swett on one of his surveying trips and was assisting him when she was bitten. Mr. Swett realizing the danger gave first aid by sucking the wound and thereby probably saving her life. She is recovering.

Miss Helen Holmes has been visiting her sister, Miss Mildred Holmes, in Portland.

The roads are now open to auto travel, although there are a few rough places in the highway, where the frost remained longer in the ground than surrounding parts. The concrete road has come out well from the winter. There are a few bad cracks where the road enters the Oxford Plains near the Wright Crossing, and few lesser ones near the Richards Crossing. These cracks occur where the land is flat without proper ditches. In these flat places the water settles so near the surface of the concrete that a freeze-up and break are almost certain. On the flat surface it is almost impossible to get good drainage. It is understood the state engineers are advocating the digging of wells at frequent intervals to take care of the surface water and in this way prevent cracks.

Norway High had little trouble in piling up runs against Mechanic Falls High Wednesday afternoon. The score was 20 to 3.

Everett F. Bowker.

Everett F. Bowker died at Ste. Marie's Hospital in Lewiston on Wednesday.

Mr. Bowker was born in Auburn Dec. 28, 1856, the son of Gideon B. and Avis E. (Allen) Bowker. The elder Bowker was a soldier in the civil war and did not return from that struggle, dying at Hilton Head, South Carolina, July 15, 1865. On the death of the father the family moved to Paris Hill, where they lived for a number of years, and where the daughters were compositors in the Democrat office.

The subject of this sketch learned the drug business in the store of Dr. Eugene B. Holden, South Paris, and followed that business all his life in Lewiston, Brockton, Lisbon and Bath.

He married Miss Ada Young, who has been dead several years, and since her death he has lived with his sisters, Miss Mary E. Bowker and Miss Anna C. Bowker in Lewiston. He had been in the hospital several months.

He was a member of Tranquil Lodge of Masons in Auburn, Lewiston Lodge of Elks and the Commercial Travelers' Association.

Beside the sisters mentioned above, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. Hazel Bertha Webster of Los Angeles, Calif.

The funeral was in Lewiston and the interment in Oak Grove Cemetery, Bath.

W. Oscar Needham.

William Oscar Needham was found dead in his room in the Leroy Spiller house in Norway, where he roomed, about 5 o'clock on Thursday afternoon. He had been about in the morning but complained of not feeling very well, and a physician was summoned. At noon he felt better, but feeling worse a little later retired to his room, where he was found dead.

He was born in Norway Dec. 27, 1845, the son of William and Eliza (Stevens) Needham. He was a civil war veteran, enlisting in the 32d Maine Regiment April 16, 1864. He was discharged July 15, 1865. After the war he went to the middle West, where he remained a few years, then came east and lived in Lowell, Mass., for a time, then returned to his native town where the rest of his life was spent.

He was a member of Harry Rust Post, G. A. R.

He leaves no relatives nearer than nieces, one of whom lives in New York and the other in Lewiston.

Charles F. Millett.

Charles F. Millett died at his home in Auburn on Tuesday of last week.

Mr. Millett was born in Norway 82 years ago, the son of Levi and Sarah Pike Millett. He was a civil war veteran, having been a member of the 10th and 29th Maine Regiments. He was married Oct. 26, 1869, to Miss Ellen Decoster of West Paris. For some time Mr. Millett operated a farm in Norway, going to Auburn some years ago, where he was engaged in optometry, traveling through the towns of Androscoggin and Oxford Counties.

While in Norway he joined Norway Lodge of Odd Fellows going through all the chairs. He was also a member of Harry Rust Post, G. A. R.

Besides his wife he is survived by four children: Bernard E. Millett of Providence, R. I., Fred E. Millett of Baltimore, Md., Mrs. Emma Howe of Portland, and William F. Millett of Yonkers, N. Y. Another daughter, Mrs. Christina Ambler of Winchester, Mass., died about two years ago.

Salvation Army Home Service.

The Salvation Army will make the annual appeal to the people of Paris this week. The funds collected are used to support the service of the Salvation Army in the state of Maine.

To aid the distressed is our duty, and the Salvation Army through the ten corps and three Industrial Homes seeks to make a reality the slogan—"A man may be down but he is never out."

Irving O. Barrows is the treasurer for the Salvation Army home service fund in Paris. The army solicitors will call to receive the contributions in the near future and a generous reponse is expected.

A. R. Smith and Envoy R. E. Littlefield are here from Portland to carry on the work.

How Silver in India Helped to Win the War

Silver fought another good fight in the World war. In 1918 the allied armies were battling desperately. Every available man was on the fighting line. One of the things the allies needed most was jute; gunny sacking is another name for jute. There is only one place in the world to get jute —India. Patiently the British government had taught the natives that silver certificates were as good as silver, but by 1918 the British government, by jute purchases, had withdrawn nearly all the silver used to back these certificates, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society. Germany learned this and began propaganda in India. A run on Indian banks would have destroyed the confidence of the natives in Britain and thrown India into revolt.

Silver must be found somewhere to save India, and possibly to save the allies. Supplies of mined silver had been exhausted. There was only one big source of silver, the vaults of the United States treasury. Here great piles of silver dollars backed our silver certificates. Britain asked for that silver. The United States sold it gladly. More than 400,000,000 of silver dollars were melted and sent to India, later to be replaced in the vaults by new purchases through the Pittman silver act. That's how silver helped win the war.

Intuition of Woman Is Swifter Than Is Man's

Sir Humphrey Rolleston, president of the British Royal College of Surgeons, verifies the observation that in women instinct is highly developed, says a London letter in the New York Evening Post.

"Women," declared Sir Humphrey the other day, "have in a more developed degree than men the power of rapid perception or intuition, allied to second sight and clairvoyance, or of arriving at a correct solution of a problem per saltum. Apart from its potential use and application in research, this faculty of arriving immediately at a correct opinion, without the process of conscious ratiocination resembles the clinical instinct born of long years of experience, and is no doubt a function of the unconscious which is so invaluable in diagnosis. Hospital sisters often have this power and when re-enforced by a more extensive training, it should be an asset to woman doctors.

While the average woman student was superior to the average man, the best woman students were not so able as the best men.

Many Use Metric System

The metric system of measurement was originated in 1786 by James Watt, the noted English inventor. One of the first nations to adopt this system was France during the French Revolution. Lavoisier, the great French chemist, was the principal influence for its adoption. Today every civilized nation in the world, except the United States and Great Britain, has adopted the metric system. These two English-speaking nations now wrestle with a jumble of other systems, hence a strong demand that the world centralize on one popular system—the metric.

They Meant Business

A man slipped on a banana peel and executed a very funny fall, not being hurt, as it turned out, but having his dignity somewhat ruffled. When he recovered a moment later a friend was holding his hat and a number of people had formed a circle.

"What do these idlers want?" he snarled.

"They are not idlers," explained his friend soothingly. "Here's a doctor who wants to look you over, a lawyer ready to bring suit for you and a producer of comic films who would like to sign you up."

Purely Ornamental

British Consul General Armstrong was talking at a New York reception about the popularity of the prince of Wales.

"When the prince," he said, "visits Balmoral, the royal estate in Scotland, he always wears the kilt. Two pretty lassies passed him on the road one day.

"'Did you see his knees?' said one of the lassies afterward. 'They were as pink and dimpled as a baby's. I wanted to kiss them, so I did.'

"'Hoot,' said the other lassie; 'they didn't look as if he prayed much.'"

Few Faced the Firing Squad.

Out of the many millions of men which comprised the British army during the late war only 346 officers and men so failed in their duty as to justify their execution by the firing squad.

Three British officers were shot—two for desertion and one for murder. One man was sentenced to death three times, each for desertion. Twice he was reprieved, but he could not stand the welter of blood and mud of the trenches so he deserted again and the third time he was shot.

Forty other men, after being sentenced to death, were reprieved only to offend again and be shot. In 266 cases the offense against the military code was desertion, though 37 men were executed for murder. Eighteen were shot for cowardice, three for mutiny and two for sleeping on duty. In all, 3,090 death sentences were passed

Voicing His Feelings.

A policeman was walking along the street, when he heard screams.

"What's up in here?" he asked a little lad who answered his knock at the door.

"Nothing, much," answered the boy. "It's only my brother Dicky, and he's crying 'cause ma is cross-eyed and deaf."

"Well, well," said the officer, "what a tender feeling he must have."

"You're right, guv'nor. Ma's mending his trousers and he's got 'em on!"

Portable Stove for Skaters.

For coasting or skating parties an excellent stove can be made from an old metal bucket and a discarded kettle, says Popular Science Monthly. The kettle is inverted and riveted to the bucket, bottom to bottom. Holes are punched about the base of the bucket to aid combustion. A charcoal of wood fire built in the bucket will be sufficient to warm chilled hands, but will not be so hot that the stove cannot be carried from place to place by the handle.

PARAGRAPHS FOR THE NEW ENGLANDER

News of General Interest From the Six States

Twenty-five head of Guernsey cattle died when a fire destroyed the barns of Leslie Bills, Dummerston, Vt., while he and his wife were away. Destruction of farm tools and other contents made the total loss $5000, partially covered by insurance.

The recent arrival of triplets at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Manuel Texeira of Oakdale, Mass., is the first in 26 years in that town. The triplets followed twins, which were born about a year and a half ago. One of the twins has died. The triplets are all boys.

In an effort to force the authorities to close the Currier grade school in the Mt. Washington district of Haverhill, Mass., mothers of school children formed picket squads, and marched back and forth in front of the building from 7.45 a. m. until the last class was dismissed at 4.30 p. m.

A radio message from the MacMillan expedition on the Bowdoin, which has wintered in the Arctic regions, was received by Everett Sutton at Port Angelis, Wash., and by him forwarded to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Mix of Bristol, Ct., parents of Don Mix, the radio operator of the expedition.

Massachusetts has again won honors. This time it is pretty Ruth Merrill, who has brought fame to her state and to the town of Swampscott. Miss Merrill won the contest awarded to fraternities and sororities of the University of Wisconsin for fire prevention drill.

The annual federal inspection of the Norwich, Vt., University cadet corps, the results of which determine the rating to be held by Norwich among the military colleges of the country, will be held May 21 and 22. For the last 20 years the university has ranked among the first 10 institutions of the country as distinguished military colleges.

Characterizing him as one of the best automobile operators on the road today and far more efficient than many two-handed drivers, State Highway Inspector Charles H. McCarthy gave Jere Reynolds of Leominster, Mass., a man who considers the loss of one hand no handicap, a license to operate a sliding-gear automobile.

Ex-Atty. Gen. William R. Pattangall of Maine, has announced that he will be a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor in the June primaries. State Senator Ralph O. Brewster of Portland, who is a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, has filed his nomination papers.

A black fox which Emile Barrier of Leominster, Mass., killed while driving home in his automobile is worth from $1000 to $1500, since there are few with jet black glossy hair. Mr. Barrier first thought the animal, blinded by motor headlights, was a raccoon. Deputy Game Warden E. J. Bates placed a high value on the black fox fur.

Traffic courts, stricter supervision and a uniform speed law were tentatively suggested as a solution of the problem of the reckless and drunken driver which was discussed at a conference of prominent Massachusetts citizens in the Governor's office at the State House. The conference was called as an emergency measure to devise methods of curtailing the startling increase in traffic casualties.

A resolution expressing sympathy for William H. Anderson, former financial secretary of the Anti-Saloon League, whose incarceration at Sing Sing prevented his speaking in Portland, Me., was adopted at the closing session of the 100th annual conference of the Maine Methodist Episcopal Church. The resolution expressed belief that Anderson did not intend to violate the law, and that the violation was merely technical.

At the 80th session of the Vermont Methodist Episcopal conference held in Bellows Falls, sentiment in favor of removing the ban on amusements, including dancing, horse racing, card playing, etc., was registered by an overwhelming vote, only two delegates holding out against it. A petition or memorial of the sentiment of the Vermont conference on the amusement ban will be presented to the general conference, at Springfield next month.

Another peace league is to be introduced into the United States, but instead of having politicians wrangle over it at Washington, and probably have it laid over until another generation brings it to light, the struggle for existence will take place at Hartford, Conn. This League for Peace will differ materially from the League of Nations inasmuch as it is formed to bar noise of motor vehicles instead of noise of booming guns.

John H. H. McNamee and William R. Bailey, former president and treasurer, respectively, of the Prudential Trust Company, Boston, won freedom from charges of unlawful lending, investing, appropriating and converting funds of the bank of which they were officers. Judge Sisk in superior court allowed the motion of their lawyers to quash the indictments on the ground that the law under which they were indicted was passed after the commission of the acts for which they were indicted.

Here and There.

It is not any wonder that our senators under their extreme emotional excitement should have feverish nights, when their imagination disconnected with reason might display wonderful pictures. According to a Washington dispatch one of them had a wonderful dream. Loaded with remorse, probably, he dreamed he died and, strange as it may seem, passed the third degree at Saint Peter's gate. On being ushered into the land of ghosts, as might be expected, he sought out the congenial spirits of the companions he had known on earth, chief among whom was Woodrow Wilson. It seems the ex-President was a little more popular in heaven than he had been on earth and was much sought after by the spirits of men of all ages who had tried to play the role of lawmaker; so our friend from Washington played the part of Boswell to his Johnson. Among those who sought the distinguished American was Moses, who tried to start the Jewish refugees in the way they should go, and made about as much of a muss of things as did the Versailles treaty. Naturally they compared notes, when the following conversation took place:

Moses—"So this is Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States."

Wilson—"Yes, I was President of the United States."

Moses—"Author of the famous 14 points, I believe."

Wilson—"Yes."

Moses—"They didn't think much of the 14 points in Washington."

Wilson—"No more than they thought of your 10 commandments."

There seems to be a revival of that old song, "O, How Dry I Am," and there certainly appears to be some reason for it, if twin items appearing in daily papers recently are any indication. The first item is the arrival at the port in Boston of 40 cases of Scotch and Irish whiskey, 41 cases of gin, 11 cases of champagne, 38 cases vermouth, 1 case Spanish wine, 1 case stout, 6 cases brandy, 1 case port, 2 cases sherry, 1 of ale and 5 of creme de menthe, all consigned to European embassies and shipped to Washington under guard. The other item was the seizure of an auto and 80 gallons of rotten alcohol which a Charlestown woman, Emma Loconta, was trying to rush to the Hub as a consolation prize for seeing all this high tone stuff taken out of the city. Certainly looks like discrimination.

So they are quarreling over who wrote "The Rosary,"—the words, that is. Robert Cameron Rogers is supposed to have written it. The verses appeared in his published volume, "The Wind in the Clearing," printed in 1894 But it has recently been claimed by the sisters of Mount Gertrude Academy, Boulder, Colo., that Father Thomas Whalen of Chicago wrote the words. Well, one can't blame Father Whalen for wanting to claim the authorship. It is not every day that one sees perfectly good passion united with perfectly good music.

Miss Marie Corelli, English novelist, is one of the principal notables to die recently. She has written a number of books which have had a wide reading, although because of subject matter and style they have brought out a good deal of criticism. Critics have been divided as to whether she had the curable itch of mediocrity or the incurable disease of genius. Her books had a good deal of mysticism about them with scenes laid not only on the solid earth but penetrating to stellar space. Religion and religious characters were her choice. Some of her best known books are the "Master Christian" and "The Sorrows of Satan." In regard to the last, most people have been of the opinion that the horned gent did most of his things out of pure cussedness and never had any moments of sorrow.

It is said more varieties of foreign languages are spoken in New England than in any other part of the country. There are thirty languages spoken in New England other than English. It is said that one person out of every forty speaks a foreign language in this territory. The general impression is that foreigners congregate in cities or large villages, but it is found that more than twenty different nationalities are to be found in farming districts.

On no less an authority than Governor Baxter it is stated that 78 per cent of American born citizens are indifferent toward government activities, and that naturalized citizens take their political obligations more seriously.

Paris Hill.

Services at Paris Hill Baptist church every Sunday at 10:45. Sunday School at 12. Sunday evening service at 7:30. Thursday evening prayer meetings at 7:30 o'clock.

We feel highly complimented that the Lewiston Sun thinks enough of our Paris items to copy them every week, almost verbatim. As this must save them considerable expense, we feel that the least they could do would be to run some of the free advertising items that we so diligently contribute to advance the success of our Baptist fair.

Mr. and Mrs. George M. Atwood spent Easter in Portland with their son William E. Atwood and his family.

A meeting of the grange was held at the Center Grange Hall last Wednesday. Mr. Packard, deputy commissioner of education, of Augusta, was the speaker of the day.

The academy ball team played the first game of the season with Exeter at Exeter last Wednesday and made an excellent showing. The game resulted in the score of 4 to 3 in favor of Exeter, but it was necessary to play two extra innings in order to decide the contest. Coach Dwyer was very much pleased by the showing made.

Charles L. Glover, who is taking a course at Boston University, recently visited his parents for a few days.

She is at the Central Maine General Hospital, and Dr. Cunningham, and several other doctors who have been in consultation, think it unwise to remove the needle at present. Arthur Tirrell's plan for the building of the school house was accepted, and the work will begin immediately.

Friends in town of Miss Isabel Jordan of Buckfield have learned of her recent marriage to Ellery Fuller of Leeds. Miss Jordan was our telephone operator a few years ago, where she won many friends by her faithful and efficient services, who wish her much happiness in her future life.

The few old, infirm civil war veterans are encouraged to live a while longer by the passage of the "Bursum pension bill," that only awaits the signature of President Coolidge to become a law. It is thought that he may approve the bill. It passed the senate by a vote of 54 to 10. It passed the house without a record vote. While those few old veterans will rejoice, it is sad to think how many have passed away since the bill was introduced over four months ago, and doubtless some of them in great need of aid in their last days. It now is up to President Coolidge to say yes or no to the veterans.

Oxford County Notes.

The state of Maine will print 290,015 ballots for the Maine primary election June 16:h, 16,000 for Oxford County. Of this number 8,580 will be regular Republican; 6,900 regular Democratic; 340 Republican for absent voting, and 280 Democratic for absent voting.

People in Oxford County are interested in Arthur L. Walden's dogs of Wonalancet, N. H., as they have gone through the county several times attached to their sledge. A suit was recently instituted against him by Miss Esther L. Wing of Newton, Mass., for a bite inflicted by one of them, and she obtained a verdict of $500. Under the New Hampshire statutes double damages are obtained for dog bites so the amount Mr. Walden will have to pay will be $1000. The plaintiff sued for $4000. Miss Wing alleged that while she and a party of school girl friends were at North Conway in January, 1922, one of Walden's dogs attacked her and bit her.

NORWAY.

THE HARVEST.

The tree had grown for a hundred years
Shading the grateful soil;
A man cut it down in half a day
And groaned because of his toil.

O merciless man with the gifts of the gods—
And this means you and me—
If you stay not your hand from its careless course
What will the harvest be?

—Don C. Seitz.

Nyiregyhazi.

Nyiregyhazi, the famous pianist, will be at Association Hall, South Paris, Wednesday evening, May 7th.

It is a wonderful opportunity Mr. Chapman is giving our town in bringing to us the greatest pianist living at the age of 21 years in the world to-day. Don't miss the opportunity of hearing this genius, as such an opportunity may never occur again. Below is quoted the headlines of the critics in New York City, as to his success there:

"Technique of the foremost virtuoso of the world. He astonishes."—W. J. Henderson, N. Y. Herald.

"The dash of his playing carries away the listener."—Henry Finck, New York Evening Post.

"Brilliant technical equipment, great strength of arms and fingers."—Richard Aldrich, The Times.

"His playing is noteworthy because of its poetic sensibility, its warmth, its maturity."—Max Smith, New York American.

"Demonstrated brilliant technique, dexterity and strength of arms and fingers."—Pitts Sanborn, New York Evening Globe.

"Continued to fill large auditorium with amazement and frequent electrification."—G. W. Gabriel, New York Evening Sun.

"This young man may as well at the outset be called the twenty year old Paderewski."—I. Weil, New York Evening Journal.

"His technique is merely a vehicle for his overwhelming effects."—Katharine Spaeth, N. Y. Evening Mail.

"His playing is unique. A pianist of amazing proficiency."—Paul Morris, New York Evening Telegram.

"Plays with the mature understanding of genius."—The Morning Telegraph.

Maine News Notes.

Gerald Murch of North Jay has a full grown hoot owl for a pet. Gerald's father caught him recently beside the path to his work. The owl was asleep and Mr. Murch picked him up, and taking him home placed him in the hayloft, where he seems contented.

The Maine delegation to the Republican convention at Cleveland will probably go by way of Albany and Buffalo in a special car attached to the train that will carry the other New England delegates. The plan is for the Maine party to leave Portland Sunday noon, June 8, going to Ayer Junction, where their car will be attached to the special New England train. This will bring them to Cleveland the day before the opening of the convention, Tuesday, June 10.

A copy of the Maine Historical and Genealogical Recorder, published in 1884 by Stephen M. Watson, then librarian of the Portland Public Library, contains an article headed "The Poor Widows of Portland in 1806." It appears that the widow of Brigadier General Jedediah Preble, who died August 5, 1805, in her will bequeathed $333 1-3 to the poor widows of Portland. This money was to be distributed among as many poor widows and in such proportion as should be designated by Rev. Samuel Deane, Rev. Elijah Kellogg and Timothy Hilliard. The money was paid to 35 widows in sums ranging from $6 1 3 to $15. The beneficiaries signed a paper acknowledging the receipt from Enoch Preble of the sums placed against their names. The use of the X mark shows that 15 of these poor widows could not write. But that was 118 years ago.

On April First the Stockholders of the Sawyer Boot & Shoe Company received quarterly dividends on their 7 per cent. Preferred Stock. They also received a distribution of their Class A Common Stock at the rate of 12 per cent. They have the privilege of owning both.

These returns on securities in an established business of over a half century, we believe constitutes an ideal investment.

There are no bonds that precede the Preferred Stock and never can be without the consent of 75 per cent. of the Preferred Stockholders—a very unusual protection.

The conservative investor can readily see the advantages of a security of this class.

(By Katherine Pope)

They put on double-harness, Jane and Phil, with little in the way of capital save youth and love and belief in one another.

They set up housekeeping in a city attic, top story of one of those old houses that persist here and there amid the tall office buildings. Their tenure was uncertain, from month to month, but their eyrie was light and airy and the rent low. And Jane, with a strong sense of congruity, made of the attic a place of un que charm and novel hospitality. Phil, who had expected to apologize for it, on the contrary exhibited it

There were braided rugs on the pine floors. There were black-painted grandmother-rockers, Windsor chairs and wood open settle, their hard seats softened with chintz cushions. Lively chintz curtains outlined the windows, otherwise uncluttered. A lusty plant here and there helped out, and a posy or two. And, oh,—luxury in the city—a real fireplace, beside it a wood box with real wood therein.

Jane was a college woman, but not one of those slovenly intellectuals who consider cleanliness and daintiness inferior matters. Possessor of both ideals and energy, Jane kept the attic fair and seemly, for ideals and energy banded together can accomplish much.

"It's a home all right, all right," said Phil, looking at Jane proudly, though appealingly.

"Stop apologizing every time you look at me," commanded Jane.

"But how dared I do it?" groaned Phil, in self-abasement. "How dared I with my infant income ask a girl to launch forth with me on the uncertain sea of matrimony?"

She looked at his fine, sensitive face, at his not over-robust frame, and her heart went out to him with increased motherliness.

"Phil, you never did ask me," she comforted him. "The girl always does that part now."

"You're a cheerful liar," he answered, but he stopped looking appealing.

Phil was being tried out as advertising man for a firm that found itself tottering, and was making a frantic effort to get back to its old standing. He was engaged for one year, knew that he was on trial, realized the situation called for constructive work on his part as well as aggressive.

"He can do it, he can do it, if only his physical strength holds out," Jane said to herself. "I've got to be his trainer and I've got to be everlastingly on the job. But how to go to work, that's my problem."

In the dead hours of the afternoon she threw herself flat on the chintz covered settle in the sunshine that poured through a row of little windows, and at ease she worked out her campaign. For, though bubbling with energy, she was not over strenuous, was wise enough to know when to relax as well as when to strive.

An hour passed. Two hours. Then with smiling lips she arose and sat down at the big desk, one side of which belonged to her. On a sheet of paper she scribbled these notes—

Blessings of Poverty
Food
Play: Theatre; Trips
Beauty: Me; House; Table
Luxuries: Flowers; Friends
Outdoor: Me; Him

Now she walked a brisk mile to a pleasant little branch library. Here she searched shelves and books and scribbled a bit. A brisk mile back home, a few moments flat on the settle, then renewed energy, and street clothes put off for a little flowered voile house-dress.

"Put a match to the fire, Phil," Jane ordered when they were ready to sit down to dinner; ordered him that he might think that he, too, was helping. The dry wood crackled, the table equipment shone in its blaze. Things were inviting generally. There was only one carnation in the vase on the table, but it was fresh and fragrant; and, as Jane asserted, she preferred the Japanese idea in decoration, a sparingness. The dinner was delicious; the hot things hot, the cold things cold. There were a thick, creamy soup and fingers of brown buttered toast; baked potatoes, lamb-chops, peas; salad and cheese-wafers; coffee and cigarettes. Tired, silent Phil presently felt rest stealing over him.

After dinner Phil cleared off; while Jane played fine lady, having won her laurels and earned her rest. Sometimes they spent the evening in talk, but tonight she chose to read aloud while he lay back in a big chair and soaked in the quiet and warmth. But before she began she asked, "Do I tell the truth, Phil?"

"You and children," he declared.

"Well, all I've got to say is that while I didn't write these gems I'm about to flash before you, I regard them as gems. Here they are—

"'Wealth is a superfluity of things you don't care for.'"

Phil laughed. "All the same, I bet you could use a white capped maid and a black-visored chauffeur."

"Oh, we will some day," she assured him. "But let me continue in my 'Attic philosophy.' 'Enough is wealth, more is disease.'"

"Being at the present moment in an 'enough' state, I'll not quarrel with that."

"'The sorrows of success,' Andrew Lang."

"That doesn't mean much in my young life."

"'The object of money is to enable one to forget it,' Henry James."

"True," agreed Phil.

That passed off pretty well, and Jane went on with her program. The next day she called on a cousin, called in search of a job. She approached Helen Winston thus: "Helen, like the young colored matrons, I'm looking for a part-time job. I want you to give it to me."

"Heavens! Why ever did you marry that penniless person? You know I told you it was the greatest mistake. You, you know, were better equipped for bagging big game than an awfully pretty girl, who is always thinking of herself."

"Thanks, Helen, but I'm after neither rebuke nor estimate. I'm after a job."

"What, in goodness' name?"

"I'll take Jimmie for outdoor exercise and nature-study—as offered in the parks—two hours every afternoon, five days a week. The child needs it, I need the money."

Helen Winston colored. She was generally away from home, leaving her little four-year-old boy largely to the mercy of the maids. He was pale and listless. The bargain was concluded.

"Three birds with one stone; good for Jimmie, good for me, a little helpful to my pocket-book. And for shame's sake Helen won't tell Phil." Thus Jane congratulated herself.

Very good times were had by Jimmie with Jane, whose capacity for joy was equalled by her capacity for affection. And Jane went back to her indoor tasks all the fresher, all the prettier, for the outdoor routine.

"How do you keep your bloom?" Phil asked her, wonderingly.

Pay-day came. "Now for our mild luxuries," Jane murmured. "A little indulgence in flowers and friends; in theatre and trips. With managing I can get them all in; and Phil must have variety, stimulation. He can't afford to get dull." There were Sunday night suppers, which cost less than dinners and were more fun. There were Saturday afternoon walking trips and dinners out. There were long Sundays spent in the country, with a snack in the woods at noon and a bang-up country dinner at evening. Jane knew that her work was good.

The year drew to an end, an inventory was taken by Phil's company. The firm had ceased tottering, and it was granted that Phil had helped save the day. He was given a fair contract, with opportunities open to him.

He went home and told Jane all about it. Then he added: "I've taken an inventory of our year, too; yours and mine."

"What is the result?" demurely asked Jane.

Non-loquacious Phil brought forth, "Double-harness has worked beyond all imagining with you as lead-horse."

"No, not lead," Jane insisted. "Team-work we've done, neither a drag."
